1. PICASSO. MASTERPIECES !

From 4 September 2018 to 13 January 2019 at the Musée national Picasso-Paris

What does 'masterpiece' mean to Pablo Picasso? The exhibition "Picasso. Masterpieces !" seeks to answer this question by assembling many of Picasso's great works from around the world, some of which are being exhibited in Paris for the very first time. Thanks to exceptional loans, masterpieces from all over the world will dialogue with those from the collection of the Musée national Picasso-Paris to offer a new interpretation of Picasso's creations, with particular attention to the critical reception of his works. Focusing on past exhibitions, reviews, and texts, this show explores how Picasso's works have become, throughout the years, iconic masterpieces. The archives of the Musée national Picasso-Paris play an essential role in recounting this story.

1. 1 EXHIBITION STRUCTURE

1. LE CHEF-D'ŒUVRE INCONNU

Achieving perfect beauty, the absolute masterpiece: this is the dream that the painter Frenhofer, the hero of Honoré de Balzac's novel, Le Chef-d'œuvre inconnu, pursued in vain. Published for the first time in 1831, the text was illustrated a century later by Pablo Picasso, at the request of art dealer Ambroise Vollard. The theme of the painter and his model which Picasso explores in his work represents the kind of ideal artistic vision which leads to Frenhofer's death as he attempts to portray the expression of a soul, to reach perfection through a work of art.

The artist at work is a running theme in Picasso's oeuvre. His many self-portraits, alone or with a model, are also reflections on the creative process. One of the most prolific painters of the 20th century, relentlessly seeking new modes of expression, Picasso dedicated his life to a quest similar to that of Frenhofer. Through a selection of key works, milestones of Picasso's artistic career, the exhibition "Picasso: Masterpieces!" looks back at this journey. From the conditions in which the artwork was produced to the influence of its critical reception, the exhibition examines the events that helped make each piece an icon of art. Throughout the 20th century, from the academic tradition to modern revolutions, Picasso's pursuits radically redefined the concept of the masterpiece.

2. SCIENCE ET CHARITÉ

Science and Charité is one of the rare pieces from Picasso's youth which he kept for himself, before it was donated to the Museu Picasso in Barcelona in 1970. Thanks to the close relationship between this institution and the Musée national Picasso-Paris, this work is now being exhibited in Paris for the first time.

Picasso was only 16 when he painted Science et Charité. While studying at Llotja, the School of Art and Design of Barcelona, he chose to paint a theme popular at art shows and among the followers of social realism: visiting the ill. The artist combines images from his daily life with academic models. His father acts as the model for the doctor, and the subject echoes a personal drama, the death of his younger sister Conchita in 1895. Sent to the General Exhibition of Fine Arts in Madrid, the work received an honourable mention, before it was awarded a gold medal at the Provincial Exhibition of Malaga. It demonstrates the incredible technical skill shown by the young Picasso.

3. LES DEMOISELLES D'AVIGNON

When he discovered Les Demoiselles d'Avignon in 1907, Georges Braque said, "It is as though, with your painting, you wanted us to eat oakum or drink oil." From its creation until its exhibition at the Salon d'Antin in Paris in 1916, the work evoked reactions of indifference, incomprehension and rejection. An emblematic canvas of the pictorial revolutions of the 20th century, Les Demoiselles d'Avignon was a foundational work in the birth of cubism. Jacques Doucet bought the piece in 1924 at the recommendation of poet André Breton, who was, at the time, one of the few able to recognize the significance of the acquisition. However, when the designer died, the work returned to the art market.

It joined the collection of the New York Museum of Modern Art in 1939. This institutional recognition conferred upon the painting the status of a modern masterpiece, more than thirty years after it was first created. Les Demoiselles d'Avignon no longer travels. The artist kept many studies for the painting throughout his life which today shed light on the genesis of the work. These studies have become icons of the Musée national Picasso-Paris.

4. LES ARLEQUINS

The Harlequin figure, Picasso's nostalgic double, features throughout the artist's works. In 1923, amidst the Return to Order, it embodies the classic ideal which Picasso expresses in the genre of portraiture. The harlequin theme, particularly appreciated by the dealer Paul Rosenberg, quickly gained favour in the art world, even leading to a fund-raising campaign in 1967 to enable the city of Basel to acquire Arlequin assis.

Picasso borrowed characteristics from the Spanish painter Jacinto Salvadó (1892-1983) for these harlequins. From one piece to the next, the model maintains the same costume and his poses are imbued with the same melancholy. Picasso repeats and reworks these motifs throughout the series.

5. LES BAIGNEUSES

On 8 February 1937, Picasso's birthplace, Malaga, was seized by nationalist troops. In the space of just a few days - on the 10th, 12th and 18th of February - Picasso painted three troubling beach scenes featuring dominant, imposing bathers. He distorted their bodies and opted for a mineral palette. The landscapes are reduced to just a few lines. The viewer's gaze is focused on these monstrous figures, inspired by Picasso's conversations with surrealists Man Ray, Paul Éluard and Dora Maar, with whom he spent the summers of 1936 and 1937.

Long kept in private collections, these three works have rarely been exhibited. Representing a true series of masterpieces, they have been brought together for the first time in France for this exhibition, thanks to a partnership between the Peggy Guggenheim Foundation in Venice, the Lyon Museum of Fine Arts and the Musée national Picasso-Paris.

6. FEMMES À LEUR TOILETTE

Femmes à leur toilette, a monumental collage created in the winter of 1937-1938, is today presented for the first time since its restoration in 2018.

Choosing the traditional theme of hairstyling, Picasso stages three women grooming themselves, evoking a series of romantic partners with whom he had been close. The images of Olga Picasso, Marie-Thérèse Walter and Dora Maar haunt the composition of this tapestry cartoon, the only one designed by the artist, which he kept throughout his life. Completed at the Grands-Augustins studio in Paris, the work directly recalls Guernica, created a few months earlier. Picasso returns to the concept of a very large format and assembles on the canvas a multitude of paper cuttings with varied motifs. The artist, who had given up on the idea of including elements of painted paper in Guernica at the start of the year, here gives free rein to this procedure inspired by the cubist studies of papier collé. Femmes à leur toilette embodies the artistic revolutions that Picasso orchestrated throughout his life and is one of the masterpieces of the Musée national Picasso-Paris.

7. LA DANSE

In spring 1925, Picasso and his wife Olga joined the Ballets russes in Monte Carlo. Picasso's interest in dance, never waning since his participation in the ballet Parade in 1917, is shown here in a troubling round dance, and recalls the death of his friend, painter Ramon Pichot. Although each figure is represented through its own visual vocabulary, the influence of surrealism can be seen through the distortion of the bodies and in the composition, which evokes a crucifixion, a favourite theme of the group.

Exhibited in 1939, alongside Guernica, at the New York Museum of Modern Art, La Danse remained in Picasso's ownership for forty years; the artist refused to part from it despite keen interest from collectors. It was eventually acquired by the Tate Gallery in London in 1965, five years after the museum's major retrospective dedicated to the artist. This masterpiece of British collections was presented at the Grand Palais in 1966, in the exhibition "Hommage à Pablo Picasso", and is today on temporary loan from the Tate.

8. LE FAUCHEUR

In 1943, Picasso chose the technique of assemblage to sculpt the original plaster version of Le Faucheur, whose face is the imprint of a sand-cast mould. Beyond this play on everyday objects, André Malraux saw in the bronze cast a true masterpiece, the very incarnation of the "act of death". On 19 November 1966, at the opening of the exhibition "Hommage à Pablo Picasso" at the Grand and Petit Palais, Picasso expressed the desire, never realised, to create a huge, monumental version of the work dedicated to Charles Baudelaire.

In 1968, under Malraux's initiative, the law on the gifting of artworks as payment of death duties was established. Eleven years later, Le Faucheur joined the national collections after Picasso's heirs consented to gift it to the state. It is today exhibited in the very heart of the Hôtel Salé.

9. OBJETS

Paper cuttings, iron wires and tablets... the pieces presented in this room offer a new perspective on Picasso's artistic process. With just a few gestures, the artist transforms everyday objects into artworks, combining humour and poetry. In the majestic Vénus du gaz, the artist re-appropriates a wood stove burner by placing it vertically.

Most of these objects were kept by the surrealist photographer Dora Maar, who shared her life with Picasso from 1936. They were photographed by Brassaï at Picasso's request. Then, in 1949, the art dealer Daniel-Henry Kahnweiler included them in his work "Les Sculptures de Picasso." During the public sale of the Dora Maar collection in 1998, these objects attracted huge attention, Picasso's renown helping to forge their status as iconic works which re-examine the notion of the masterpiece under a new light.

10. JOSEP PALAU I FABRE

« Mirar la producción de Picasso, descubrir su obra, tiene que generar siempre, una euforia beneficiosa, porque él es, por encima de todo, vital »
(Josep Palau i Fabre, Barcelone, 16 février 2003)

"Estimat Picasso" ("Dear Picasso"), this is the title of one publication by Josep Palau i Fabre (1917-2008), the Catalan poet and writer, who became friends with the artist in the 1960s. He dedicated more than twenty works to Picasso and gave him pride of place in his collection, today kept by the Fundació Palau in Caldes d' Estrac, in the province of Barcelona. Within this collection, the many dedications Picasso wrote to Palau i Fabre attests to the close bond between the artist and the biographer. Through his publications and collection, the writer offers a dual reading of Picasso's work, authoring both literary and scientific studies that portray the Spanish artist as a genius of the 20th century, and providing a glimpse of the private and everyday creation of a masterpiece, as exemplified by the marionette theater made by Picasso for his daughter Maya in 1942, exhibited in this room.

11. SCULPTURES

In Cannes, Picasso enjoyed displaying his sculptures in the garden of the villa La Californie which he bought in 1955. Photographs by David Douglas Duncan provide an account of this installation which was only accessible to visitors of the studio. The sculptures are pretexts for much of his technical experiments as well as intimate works; as shown with Petit Cheval, created from the legs of table for the Spanish artist's grandson Bernard Ruiz-Picasso.

It was only in 1966 that the general public was able to discover the full wealth of Picasso's sculpted work, during the exhibition "Hommage à Pablo Picasso", held at the Grand and Petit Palais, curated by Jean Leymarie. 196 sculptures were presented, revealing an immense variety of subjects, materials and techniques. The event was extremely popular, and Picasso's sculptures which had once dwelled in the shadows of studios, finally acquired the public status of a masterpiece.

12. LA CHÈVRE

Between spring 2017 and spring 2019, the Musée national Picasso-Paris is launching an international cultural event bringing together over 60 institutions within the framework "Picasso-Méditerranée". This collaboration through the loan of masterpiece has facilitated dialogue between the Musée Picasso in Antibes and the Picasso museum of Paris.

During the summer of 1946, Picasso lived in Golfe-Juan, near Antibes. Romuald Dor de La Souchère invited him to set up his studio in the Grimaldi museum, where he was the director. The artist worked there from September to November and, upon his departure, left 23 paintings and 44 sketches to the city. Twenty years later, Château Grimaldi became the first museum dedicated to Picasso in France, contributing to the artist's renown. Of the works produced in Antibes, La Chèvre is a majestic representation of an important animal in Picasso's bestiary. As though incomplete, somewhere between a sketch and a painting, the animal's body combines realist drawing and cubist geometrization.

After the creation of this unique masterpiece, the goat as a motif, inhabiting the landscapes of Bacchanalia and a symbol of the years in the south of France, becomes one of the emblems of Picasso's work.

13. LITHOGRAPHIES

The collaboration between Picasso and lithographer Fernand Mourlot began in Paris in 1945, in a printing studio on Rue de Chabrol. Their conversations led to the creation of the famous Colombe which, after being spotted by the poet Aragon in 1949, became a symbol of peace printed in millions of copies found across the entire world. In the printer's studio, the collaborations continued. In 1948, Mourlot printed 215 of Picasso's plates for the book, Le Chant des morts by Pierre Reverdy, a masterpiece of book illustration. The two men pushed the boundaries of lithography and embarked on an unprecedented exploration of poster art. The lithographic stones on which the two men worked as well as the tools and souvenirs of these experiments, are today exhibited for the first time.

In 1970, Fernand Mourlot published the catalogue "Picasso Lithographe." The work reveals the abundance of Picasso's research on prints and his virtuosity in the art of duplication; his printed images rank among his masterpieces.

14. AVIGNON

From May to October 1970, the Palais des Papes in Avignon dedicated a first exhibition to Picasso. Designed by the publisher Christian Zervos and his wife Yvonne, who died a few months before its opening, the project inventoried the artist's creations between the years 1969 and 1970. On 23 May 1973, Jacqueline Roque opened a second exhibition at the Palais des Papes, "Picasso 1970-1972", one month after the artist's death. The works exhibited received virulent criticism; some were referred to as 'scribbles.' In the 1980s, however, new interpretations of Picasso's last paintings emerged. As they became compared to the works of such artists as Francis Bacon and David Hockney, art historians began to reassess their value.

15. EPILOGUE

For the writer and art historian Pierre Daix, Rembrandt and Picasso are united by an "ancient intimacy." Traces of Rembrandt (1606-1669) are found throughout the Spanish artist's career, from his works on Le Chef-d'œuvre inconnu in the 1930s to the prints he focused on at the end of his life. Beginning in the 1960s, Picasso quoted Rembrandt in his musketeers motif. Picasso's dedication to engraving, which he pursued intensely in his last studio, was largely fueled by references to the great master of the technique. For Picasso, Rembrandt represented at once a guardian figure and a rival from a bygone century who epitomized a creative genius. His reflections on the self-portrait, a genre that Rembrandt explored throughout his life and which characterizes over 80 of his pieces, is a clear inspiration in the last works of the Spanish artist. In 1972, a few months before his death, Picasso paid tribute to the Dutch master in his ultimate masterpieces. Both artists are brought together here, a presage to the exhibition "Les Louvre de Picasso" at the Louvre-Lens in 2020.

Curators

Émilie Bouvard, curator at the Musée national Picasso-Paris

Émilie Bouvard is an art historian and curator at the Musée national Picasso-Paris where she is in charge the paintings collection (1938-1972), research, publications, and contemporary art. She was the co-curator of the exhibition "Picasso.Mania" in 2015 at the Galeries nationales of the Grand Palais; in 2017 she was co-curator of the "Picasso 1947. Un don majeur au Musée national d'art modern," and in 2018, is co-curating the exhibitions "Guernica" with Géraldine Mercier and "Picasso. Chefs d'oeuvre !" with Coline Zellal at the Musée national Picasso-Paris. In November 2017, she completed her thesis in art history on the "Violence of the art of women. 1958-1978" at the university Paris I Panthéon-Sorbonne.

Coline Zellal, curator at the Musée national Picasso-Paris

Coline Zellal, educated at the École Normale Supérieure, has been the curator of heritage since 2015. At the École Normale Supérieure in Lyon here she began studying in 2010, her first publications focused on the history of Grasse perfumes in the 20th century. First studying social history and cultural history, she then studied questions of landscape heritage. She was the curator of the "Jardins" show at the Galeries nationales du Grand Palais in 2017.

She joined the Institut national du Patrimoine as a museum curator in 2015. Specializing in modern art, she is now at the Musée national Picasso-Paris, responsible for prints, posters, and the personal collection of Pablo Picasso.

LES CHEFS-D'ŒUVRE DE PABLO PICASSO

Émilie Bouvard

Quelques clichés, et épithètes homériques, circulent au sujet de Pablo Picasso. Deux idées, en particulier, forment un couple contradictoire : Picasso est un génie et Picasso n'aurait pas fait « que » des « chefs-d'œuvre ». Le « peintre de Guernica », comme il est souvent désigné dès l'après-guerre dans la presse de gauche, l'auteur des Demoiselles d'Avignon, pour citer ses deux chefs-d'œuvre les plus attestés, serait aussi celui qui aurait tendance à peindre trop vite, celui qui, à la fin de sa vie, se serait caricaturé et dont l'amateur « éclairé » pourrait distinguer le bon grain de l'ivraie. Ainsi, chacun se plaît parfois à faire la moue face à certaines œuvres de Picasso, croyant faire preuve de sagacité esthétique rejoignant alors sans le savoir une réflexion d'André Malraux dans ses Antimémoires selon laquelle « l'œuvre : destin ou génie, est appelée par quelque chose qui lui préexiste et qui, comme la vie, rencontre la conjoncture ; le chef-d'œuvre est garant du génie, le génie n'est pas garant du chef-d'œuvre ». Selon Malraux, l'œuvre répondrait à une nécessité qui la dépasse, à une vocation spirituelle appelant le talent de l'artiste à lui donner forme ; sans pour autant que l'artiste dit « de génie » crée toujours des chefs-d'œuvre. Le génie est dès lors conçu comme une compétence virtuelle qui ne vient à s'exprimer que dans certaines circonstances, épousant le destin d'une œuvre qui doit advenir et se fait chef-d'œuvre. Il n'est pas évident que cette conception spiritualiste du « chef-d'œuvre » soit celle de Picasso. On ignore quelles furent ses réactions et pensées face à ses détracteurs et face à ceux qui hiérarchisaient selon différentes valeurs sa production artistique. On sait mal, ou peu, comment Picasso jugeait la réception de son propre travail. Les témoignages manquent à cet égard. Son abonnement de plusieurs dizaines d'années au Lit-tout, ancien Argus de la presse, signale à tout le moins qu'il était avide d'être informé de ce que l'on disait de lui et de son travail artistique. Si lui-même est conscient visiblement d'avoir produit un chef-d'œuvre exceptionnel en peignant Guernica, on ne connaît pas encore assez bien le rapport intime, et de jugement, qu'il entretint avec sa propre création et si lui-même y établissait des différences. On peut penser qu'il affectionnait particulièrement les « Picasso de Picasso », ces œuvres conservées par-dessus lui tout au long de sa vie et dont une partie forme le cœur de la collection du Musée national Picasso-Paris et de cette exposition. Mais était-ce parce qu'il les jugeait « réussies » ? Le fait qu'il a également gardé l'ensemble de ses « papiers », créant une archive de plusieurs centaines de milliers de pièces diverses, rappelle qu'il était aussi question en constituant cette double « collection » intime de « tenir son journal ». C'est pourquoi, si l'on est attentif à l'attitude même de Picasso, caractérisée par une forme d'accumulation, on est amené à penser d'emblée que par-delà les « chefs-d'œuvre », c'est bien l'œuvre entier, œuvres et « papiers », les ateliers dans leur ensemble, qui tendaient aussi à faire « chef-d'œuvre ». On situe mieux ainsi le rôle fondamental des photographes invités à pénétrer l'atelier pour Picasso.

1. « Si vous deviez choisir vous-même la toile qui devrait vous survivre quelle serait-[elle] ? – Je ne sais pas, c'est difficile, c'est fait avec des intentions tellement du moment, de l'époque, de l'état dans lequel tout le monde et moi nous nous trouvons. Au moment de Guernica, j'ai fait Guernica, c'était une grande catastrophe, même au commencement de beaucoup d'autres que nous avons subies, n'est-ce-pas ? » Pablo Picasso interviewé par Adam Saulnier dans « Panorama », Office national de radiodiffusion télévision française, 21 octobre 1966.

De plus, la vie et l'œuvre de Picasso donnent le sentiment d'une vaste entreprise de dé-hierarchisation du high and low. Celle-ci commence avec le goût pour les objets extra-occidentaux, réputés alors dans une France coloniale comme des artefacts de moindre qualité artistique, voire non artistiques, se poursuit dans le contexte surréaliste de l'attention portée aux objets étranges, de diverses natures et provenance, produits de la nature ou de l'homme, valorisés par les photographies de Brassaï ou de Dora Maar ; puis viennent, à Vallauris, la fréquentation des artisans potiers et de leurs objets, et l'accumulation d'objets de rebut pour les assemblages des années 1950, Picasso sublimant la poubelle en sculpture une dizaine d'années avant les Nouveaux Réalistes. On ajoutera à cette attitude l'attrait général pour le style

2. « L'œuvre qu'on fait est une façon de tenir

2. « L'œuvre qu'on fait est une façon de tenir son journal. » Pablo Picasso cité dans Tériade, « En causant avec Picasso », L'Intransigeant, 15 juin 1932.

« enfantin ». Enfin, le voyage précis dans la peinture ancienne entre 1954 et le milieu des années 1960, puis dans le « Grand Style » en général, exposé à Avignon, demeure nourri de cette ambivalence générée par toute forme d'appropriation, entre hommage, défi et cannibalisme. Il démontre que l'on peut toucher, et même malaxer, déformer, refaire les « chefs-d'œuvre », et les déplacer de leur piédestal. Une double lecture pourrait être faite de cette dizaine d'années de reprises. Il est certain que Picasso estime au plus haut point Velázquez, Manet, Titien, Delacroix et mène au cours de ces années un projet plastique d'analyse de leur travail pictural, passant par leur intégration à son propre processus créatif, visant à comprendre en refaisant inlassablement, travail dont les dizaines de « Ménines » portent la trace. Dans le même temps, pour cet homme mené toute sa vie d'artiste par l'antiacadémisme, il s'agit peut-être aussi de contester le fait que ces œuvres révolutionnaires, choquantes, ou extrêmement intrigantes à leur époque, comme le raconte l'histoire de l'art, une fois reconnues comme « chefs-d'œuvre », intègrent le « bon goût » et une forme d'académisme, celui de ce qui est « apprécié », reconnu par les institutions et le public. Dans l'histoire du processus créatif des Demoiselles d'Avignon, il y a cet événement, suscitant sûrement la création de Picasso : l'Olympia de Manet, cette prostituée, entre au Louvre auprès de La Grande Odalisque d'Ingres en 1907. Il conviendrait alors de créer un nouveau bordel, des portraits de prostituées modernes, choquantes pour Picasso, ce serait aussi les faire revoir à tous dans toute leur violence et leur rupture originelle d'avec le monde qui les a vus naître. Quoi de plus drôle que de voir Les Ménines, les Femmes d'Alger ou Le Déjeuner sur l'herbe devenir des œuvres tour à tour enfantines, puissamment érotiques, peintes dans un style à la touche apparente, ostensiblement visible ? De leur redonner leur parfum de scandale originel et que nous ne voyons plus ?

Rien de tel donc qu'un chef-d'œuvre inconnu. En effet, c'est le sens de la nouvelle de Balzac illustrée par Picasso. Dans ce récit, le jeune Poussin se trompe d'abord, admirant une Marie égyptienne exécutée par Porbus. Frenhofer énonce alors : « C'est un chef-d'œuvre pour tout le monde, et les initiés aux plus intimes arcanes de l'art peuvent seuls découvrir en quoi elle pèche. » Le « chef-d'œuvre pour tout le monde », ou les raisons pour lesquelles le chef-d'œuvre est apprécié de tous, ne serait donc pas la même chose que le « chef-d'œuvre » vrai.

Il est ainsi un fait saillant de l'œuvre de Pablo Picasso : celui-ci tend à jouer avec la conception usuelle du terme de « chef-d'œuvre », en tant qu'accomplissement pour un créateur, œuvre unique, et vite institutionnalisée. C'est pourquoi il n'est sans doute pas anodin, même si cette pratique est courante pour lui, qu'il repeigne Derniers moments, la peinture exposée lors de l'Exposition universelle de 1900, le succès académique par excellence, pour la recouvrir de La Vie, œuvre secrète, complexe sur le plan iconographique, biographique et métaphysique. Les Demoiselles d'Avignon va demeurer longtemps dans l'atelier (aussi parce que l'œuvre n'a d'abord pas plu), inconnue, et son interprétation est encore aujourd'hui complexe. Autre phénomène, Picasso travaille très tôt en série, démultipliant les « chefs-d'œuvre », ce qui vient immédiatement contrecarrer la notion elle-même associée à l'idée d'une œuvre unique : séries d'« Arlequins » dans les années 1920, de « Baigneuses » dans les années 1930, etc., déclinant, dérivant, rééditant un motif, et créant de la sorte des ensembles. Le phénomène s'accentue après la Seconde Guerre mondiale. Il est une caractéristique majeure de l'œuvre picassienne que les contraintes économiques et matérielles des expositions aujourd'hui, ainsi que le désir de constituer des ensembles d' « échantillons », tendent à faire oublier. À cet égard, les expositions d'Avignon de 1970 et 1973, par leur scénographie voulue par Picasso lui-même, marquent l'apogée de cette pratique sérielle, les œuvres semblant s'engendrer les unes les autres, formant un théâtre qui s'agrandit de jour en jour et finit par les englober toutes. Elles témoignent, à la fin de sa vie, comme l'accumulation d'œuvres, de papiers, et de « choses » que l'on découvre alors dans les différentes maisons de l'artiste, de la recherche d'un chef-d'œuvre total, de la valorisation de l'ensemble face à l'académique morceau de bravoure.

3. Honoré de Balzac, Le Chef-d'œuvre inconnu, Paris, Gallimard, coll. « Folio », 2015, p. 41.

Ainsi, la production souvent frénétique de Picasso témoigne de son antiacadémisme, de son refus de rechercher l'œuvre « ultime », « de valeur supérieure », de son mépris des variations « qualitatives » de la création par rapport au projet global. Entre aussi dans cette attitude l'indifférence à la hiérarchie des media utilisés, Picasso pratiquant avec une très forte implication la poterie ou la gravure, en étroite collaboration avec les Ramié, Fernand Mourlot, ou les frères Crommelynck, introduisant une dimension collective dans l'élaboration des « chefs-d'œuvre », qui remet par là même en question l'individualisme radical associé au génie – tout en soignant, non sans ambivalence, sa présence personnelle dans la presse et son image, ou en alimentant le « Mystère Picasso » pour un Clouzot. Enfin, on peut du côté de la sculpture relever le refus de tout matériau noble (marbre, pierre, taille directe) au profit du déchet et du morceau trouvé, ainsi que le goût pour les « petits riens », papiers déchirés, bricoles assemblées dans les années 1940, photographiés comme les autres sculptures par Brassaï à la demande de Picasso, et conservés par Dora Maar.

Se dégage alors autour de Picasso une nouvelle idée du génie, contemporaine celle-ci : non plus celui qui est extraordinairement doué dans ses gestes et compétences – même si Picasso l'était – mais celui qui « trouve », qui « a l'œil », qui sait assembler, jeter quelques coups de pinceau suffisants pour faire œuvre, manier la terre, la pierre lithographique ou l'eau-forte tel un alchimiste ou un chercheur expérimental. Comme le soulignent de nombreux auteurs du catalogue, les différentes pratiques que nous avons identifiées conduisent ainsi à une esthétique globale de l'inachèvement (qui elle aussi a son histoire), celle d'une œuvre qui s'arrête « juste à temps », par une forte nécessité interne allant au-delà de celle de « remplir » l'espace de la toile ou du papier, d'achever la « série », ou de « bien » assembler les objets. L'œuvre de Picasso s'affirme ainsi comme plus conceptuelle, composée d'« idées rendues visibles », que ce que l'on considère d'ordinaire, et il faut rendre justice à ce processus créatif particulier.

Cette exposition repose donc sur l'hypothèse que la modernité, et la contemporanéité de Picasso, passent également par l'entreprise de révision générale qu'il fait subir au « chef-d'œuvre », à cette notion ancienne pivot d'une conception traditionnelle de l'art. Il menace au passage la notion même de « génie », qui lui est si souvent accolée et face à laquelle il montre ainsi une attitude ambiguë, la justifiant en se mettant en scène comme créateur, et la détruisant à chaque œuvre réalisée « vite », dans la spontanéité.

Lorsque le tissage des Demoiselles d'Avignon est accompli par Jacqueline de La Baume-Dürrbach en 1958 dans son atelier de Cavalaire-sur-Mer, Picasso est déjà familier des qualités de transposition que la tapisserie peut offrir à ses œuvres. Dès la fin des années 1920, l'artiste est sollicité par Marie Cuttoli pour proposer des cartons de tapisserie qui seraient ensuite exécutés par les ateliers d'Aubusson. Le carton le plus ambitieux est le monumental collage des Femmes à leur toilette, créé pendant l'hiver 1937-1938 rue des Grands-Augustins (Musée national Picasso-Paris, MP176), devenu œuvre à part entière, et finalement traduit en laine à la fin des années 1960 par la manufacture des Gobelins. Après la guerre, de nouveau par l'entremise de M. Cuttoli, Yvette Cauquil-Prince réalise des tapisseries d'après des tableaux existants de Picasso, et en 1954, ce dernier confie à la lissière Jacqueline de La Baume-Dürrbach le soin de tisser parmi ses peintures les plus célèbres Guernica (1937, Madrid, Museo nacional Centro de Arte Reina Sofia) est ainsi tissée en trois exemplaires, le premier acquis par le collectionneur Nelson A. Rockefeller en 1955.

Les Demoiselles d'Avignon (1907), « œuvre-manifeste » de Picasso selon Pierre Daix, achetée en 1924 par Jacques Doucet grâce à André Breton, rejoint les prestigieuses collections du MoMA en 1939. Jacqueline de La Baume-Dürrbach en entreprend le tissage en 1958, après avoir achevé le carton préparatoire au format, au mois de février, à partir d'une reproduction en couleurs. Trois exemplaires sont tissés sur un métier en basse lice (horizontal) : l'un revient à Picasso, le deuxième à l'atelier des Dürrbach, et le troisième est acquis par Rockefeller. Les lettres d'Alfred H. Barr, directeur du MoMA, ami et conseiller du gouverneur de New York, publiées dans un ouvrage consacré aux « Picasso de Rockefeller » en 2014, révèlent les incompréhensions suscitées par la tapisserie, arrivée aux États-Unis en 1962, Barr espérant une copie à l'identique du tableau lorsque la lissière, avec les encouragements de l'artiste, en livre une « interprétation » : limitant depuis 1955 ses laines à un nombre restreint de nuances, toutes de format identique, elle choisit de ne plus procéder au travail de couture qui parachève traditionnellement la fabrication d'une tapisserie. Ces choix ont pour conséquence d'aplanir le modelé et d'accuser le syncrétisme du dessin que la lissière, formée à l'académie Julian à Paris, maîtrisait parfaitement. La palette n'est pas imitative, les formes sont cernées de contours en zigzag, et en substitut des zones de gris-blanc brossées autour des personnages et des traces de pinceau originelles - que la jeune femme refusait de copier -, apparaissent des motifs décoratifs qui

Si Barr resta dubitatif face à ces libertés, on note que l'exemplaire de Picasso, aujourd'hui présenté dans l'exposition « Picasso. Chefs-d'œuvre ! », occupait une place de choix dans le salon de La Californie où l'artiste clamait à qui voulait l'entendre que « la tapisserie était tellement mieux que l'original ».

LE CHEF-D'OEUVRE : INTERPRÉTATIONS DANS LA LITTÉRATURE PICASSIENNE

Juliette Degennes

« Les œuvres d'art finissent par se poser, par devenir respectables. Mais, après cent ans d'existence, la toile de Picasso demeure si neuve, si troublante qu'il serait insultant d'en faire un chef-d'œuvre. »

Écrits à l'occasion de la célébration du centenaire des Demoiselles d'Avignon en 2007, ces mots ne peuvent qu'interpeller le lecteur du journal dans lequel ils sont publiés : Les Demoiselles d'Avignon est en effet devenu, en près de quatre-vingts ans depuis son acquisition par le Museum of Modern Art de New York, l'archétype du chef-d'œuvre moderne.

Si le concept est inventé en 1200 au sein des corps de métiers d'artisans, c'est à partir du XVIIIe siècle qu'évoquer le chef-d'œuvre, c'est évoquer l'Art en soi. Reliques de maîtres anciens éteints depuis des siècles, mais dont la beauté se conserve à travers le temps, la notion semble cependant prendre un autre sens lorsqu'il s'agit de Picasso : la distance

1. Jonathan Jones, « Pablo's Punks », The Guardian, 9 janvier 2007. [“Les œuvres d'art finissent par s'installer, deviennent respectables. Mais, cent ans plus tard, Picasso est encore si nouveau, si troublant, que ce serait une insulte d'appeler cela un chef-d'œuvre.”]

2. Hans Belting, « L'art moderne à l'épreuve du mythe du chef-d'œuvre », dans Hans Belting, Arthur Danto et al., Qu'est-ce qu'un chef-d'œuvre ?, Paris, Gallimard, 2000.

historique nécessaire pour qualifier une œuvre de « chef-d'œuvre » se dissout. Puisqu'il s'agit de Picasso, puisqu'il est un génie, ses œuvres semblent au moment même de leur création relever de l'évidence : elles sont chefs-d'œuvre. « À qui me demanderait maintenant quelle est celle des œuvres de Picasso que je préfère, je répondrais qu'à chaque instant c'est la dernière », affirme Michel Leiris.

La littérature critique, constituée aussi bien par des contemporains de Picasso que par des historiens de l'art, contribue à entretenir ce mythe du chef-d'œuvre autour de l'artiste espagnol. Est-il alors possible de déterminer quels sont les chefs-d'œuvre au sein de l'œuvre de Picasso ? Ce terme fait-il encore sens pour évoquer la création protéiforme, sérielle et foisonnante de l'artiste ? Comment appréhender les analyses souvent filtrées par la fascination exercée par Picasso ?

Le choix d'un certain nombre d'extraits au sein de cette abondante littérature s'est voulu raisonné : allant de critiques amis de Picasso (Apollinaire, Cocteau, Éluard), eux-mêmes artistes, à des textes contemporains de notre époque, régis par une intention scientifique (M.-L. Bernadac, R. Krauss, T. J. Clark). Les principaux textes de dix-sept auteurs, incontournables de l'historiographie de Picasso, sont ainsi présentés autour de la question du chef-d'œuvre. Les citations choisies, qu'elles soient sous formes courtes ou proposent des réflexions plus théoriques, tentent d'illustrer comment leur auteur pense la notion de chef-d'œuvre chez Picasso. Une œuvre est parfois évoquée, érigée en icône ; pour d'autres, c'est bien le processus créatif qui exerce la fascination digne des chefs-d'œuvre. Dans un siècle où la modernité se fend de rejeter ce concept, trop figé pour la création protéiforme des artistes modernes, les extraits retenus témoignent pourtant d'un ancrage puissant de la vision romantique de l'artiste. Penser cette notion de chef-d'œuvre devient alors concomitant à la pensée du génie et à la façon dont Picasso envisage lui-même la création.

Une attention particulière a été portée à trois historiens de l'art dont les travaux ont largement contribué à former la légende picassienne, et qui jalonnent l'exposition : Pierre Daix, biographe de Picasso, André Malraux, fervent admirateur qui a rendu possible la dation Pablo Picasso, et Christian Zervos, auteur du catalogue raisonné de l'œuvre de Picasso. Par leurs publications, ces auteurs contribuent à la diffusion des œuvres : on trouve fréquemment dans les Cahiers d'art, édités par Zervos, les œuvres les plus récentes de l'artiste. Picasso y est présenté telle l'incarnation du génie aux dons divins : dans le numéro 1 de l'année 1953, l'essai de Maurice Blanchot

4. Voir Antonin Artaud, « Pour en finir avec les chefs-d'œuvre », Le Théâtre et son double, Paris, Gallimard, 1966.

« Le regard d'Orphée » commente le rapport à la création dans le mythe d'Orphée. Si aucun nom d'artiste n'est mentionné, les planches d'illustrations choisies par l'auteur et l'éditeur sont bel et bien des œuvres de Picasso : une huile sur toile, Tête de femme (profil), de 1938, ainsi qu'une huile sur contreplaqué, Tête, de 1939.

De ces lectures, des grands thèmes ont émergé, façonnant une vision contrastée du chef-d'œuvre, véhicule de fantasmes, de poncifs et de déception. La multiplicité des approches, envisageant le chef-d'œuvre tour à tour jeu d'enfant et parfaite maîtrise esthétique, ancré dans son temps ou intemporel, sujet de discours ou évidence inexplicable, révèle toute l'ambiguïté de ce terme. Poser des mots apparaît alors comme une tentative d'interprétation permise L'objet du mythe*, Paris, École nationale supérieure des beaux-arts de Paris, 2005), et Marylin McCully, A Picasso Anthology : Documents, Criticism, Reminiscences, Londres, The Arts Council of Great Britain / Thames & Hudson, 1981.

6. Parmi les nombreux ouvrages écrits par P. Daix sur Picasso, nous pouvons citer La Vie de peintre de Pablo Picasso, Paris, [ou Éd. du Seuil : unifier] Seuil, 1977 ; le Dictionnaire Picasso, Paris, Robert Laffont, 1995, ou encore Picasso, Trente ans après, Neuchâtel, Ides et Calendes, 2003.

7. Voir, dans le présent catalogue, l'essai de François de Saint-Cheron. Maurice Blanchot, « Le regard d'Orphée », Cahiers d'art, no 1, juin 1953, p. 73-75. Les illustrations reproduites sont les suivantes : Pablo Picasso, Tête de femme (profil), 1938, huile sur toile, 65 x 50 cm. Collection particulière ; Pablo Picasso, Tête, 1939, huile sur contreplaqué, 33 x 24 cm. Collection particulière par la richesse de l'oeuvre décrite. Se mêlent la pensée du chef-d'oeuvre, tentative de comprendre les critères de l'oeuvre reconnue comme telle, et le « penser le chef-d'oeuvre » : quel recours le discours littéraire possède-t-il pour exprimer l'aura de l'oeuvre ? S'inscrivant dans la tradition littéraire de l'ekphrasis, ces écrits s'en écartent, se confrontant au langage limite de l'artiste. Commentaires de son génie, évocations d'une oeuvre qui l'illustre à son paroxysme, Picasso devient, de faiseur de chefs-d'oeuvre, sujet de chefs-d'oeuvre.

- UN JEU D'ENFANT

Jean Cocteau, Picasso, recueil de divers écrits, Paris, L'École des loisirs, 1996, p. 77.

« Le calme revenu après plusieurs spectacles, nous entendîmes un monsieur dire à un autre : "Si j'avais su que c'était si bête, j'aurais emmené les enfants." Cette phrase m'incline naturellement à vous citer celle que tant de tableaux de Picasso doivent entendre : "Mon petit garçon (ou ma petite fille) pourrait en faire autant." Cela vient de ce que tout chef-d'oeuvre, toute oeuvre importante, ont l'air facile, et si c'est vers cette facilité apparente que des artistes se dirigent, c'est de cette fausse facilité que le public se détourne. Il y a malheureusement une pente à préférer

9. Cocteau évoque ici les représentations de Parade, ballet de Jean Cocteau et Léonide Massine, mis en musique par Erik Satie. Le rideau, le décor et les costumes sont signés Pablo Picasso. Le ballet a été créé par les Ballets russes de Serge de Diaghilev, au théâtre du Châtelet, en 1917.

ce qui affecte un air difficile. Mais ceux qui flairent les chefs-d'oeuvre sont toujours ceux qui comprennent que les grands artistes cherchent à être simples. »

Roland Penrose, cité par John Berger, La Réussite et l'échec de Pablo Picasso, Paris, Denoël, 1968, p. 142-143

« Prenant un vase que venait de jeter Aga, le chef potier, Picasso se mit à le mouler entre ses doigts. Il commença par en pincer le col de sorte que le corps du vase devienne résistant comme un ballon, puis en quelques torsions et pressions adroites il transforma cet objet utilitaire en une colombe légère, fragile, et respirant la vie. "Vous voyez, dit-il, pour faire une colombe il faut commencer par lui tordre le cou.

C'est ainsi que Berger commente cette citation : « C'est bien entendu un jeu. Mais le jeu et la magie sont parfaitement conciliables. (Tous les enfants passent par une période où ils croient le monde régi par le désir ou la volonté.) [...] »

Viewing: Parade by Koji Yamamura

Musical adaption by the group Skéné

Thursday 25 October 2018 (exceptional evening hours)

In celebration of Picasso's birthday

Three viewings of 15 minutes at 19h, 20h et 21h

free admission to the auditorium

The animated film "Parade" by Koji Yamamura is both an hommage to and a free, joyful reimagining of the joint work of Cocteau, Satie, and Picasso which provoked scandal among classicists but was moving nonetheless and which remains etched in history as a brilliant, foundational expression of the Dadaist movement. Through the medium of animation, Japanese artist, Koji Yamamura transposes "PARADE de SATIE" into a cinemascope format, in a teeming parade of silhouettes and wire-like figurines.

Catherine Verhelst and Hervé Tougeron from the Skéné company have imagined an adaption of Koji Yamamura's film in the form of a cinematic concert comprised of four musical performers.

This unique set of chairs, benches, tables and lamps, created exclusively for the museum, marks the culmination of the work of Diego Giacometti, executing his last commission before his death in July 1985.

3.2 FUTURE EXHIBITIONS AT THE MUSEUM

PICASSO-RUTAULT. GRAND ECART

20 November 2018-10 March 2019

Curator: Coline Zellal

The work of Claude Rutault sparks a dialogue with the collection of the Musée national Picasso-Paris in the paintings, graphic art, and sculptures that will be on view for this exhibition. The show will examine the 'rupture' between traditional visions of painting - those of a completed canvas, signed and dated - and the creative process of Claude Rutault in which he establishes a descriptive of his work which then renews itself. A fixed object - a painting, drawing, or sculpture - becomes confronted by a subjectless painting which is real to us only in its physical presence, exemplifying a model of definitions/methods deployed by the artist since 1973. The works of Rutault and Picasso represent two distinct moments of painting which are seemingly irreconcilable with one another and yet, are here exhibited side by side. The painting by Claude Rutault presented in the Salon Jupiter finds echoes with the "Picasso. Masterpieces !" exhibition.

19 February-25 August 2019

Curators: Laurent Le Bon, Claire Garnier, Emilia Philippot, Alexander S.C Rower, Bernard Ruiz-Picasso.

Alexander Calder (1898-1976) and Pablo Picasso (1881-1973) changed the way we perceive. By exploring figurative themes like abstraction, the exhibition "Calder-Picasso" will examine expressions of negative space in the works of these two artists, both in their resonances and in their differences. The exhibition will focus on tangible traces of their relationship - their points in common, their meetings, their artistic collaborations, and the coordinated display of their works. These elements will underlie the exhibition as it suggests objective and metaphorical interpretations of both artists' works through the matrix of the void. Embedded in 20th century modernity, Calder and Picasso privilege the direct and personal experiences impressed upon the viewers of their art as they offer obscure and sometimes illusory perspectives. The exhibition will assemble approximately 150 works, organized according to a thematic route, unified through the theme of the void, revealing some of the formal and conceptual tensions latent in the art of these two major artists of the 20th century. The show will be accompanied by a catalogue comprised of numerous major texts.

The show is produced in partnership with the Calder Foundation and la Fundación Almine y Bernard Ruiz-Picasso para el Arte. It will travel to the Museo Picasso Málaga in Fall 2019. The show is produced in partnership with the Calder Foundation and la Fundación Almine y Bernard Ruiz-Picasso para el Arte. It will travel to the Museo Picasso Málaga in Fall 2019.

Picasso-Méditerranée, an initiative of the Musée national Picasso-Paris "Picasso-Méditerranée" is an international cultural event which will take place from spring 2017 to autumn 2019. More than seventy institutions are collaborating to create a program around the characteristically Mediterranean work of Pablo Picasso. Initiated by the Musée national Picasso-Paris, this exploration of Picasso's creative process and of the places that inspired him, offers an unprecedented cultural experience which strives to strengthen the links between art, artist, and place.

3.4 THE MOST IMPORTANT COLLECTION OF PICASSO'S WORKS

For its quality and scope, in addition to the range of art forms it encompasses, the collection at the Musée national Picasso-Paris is the only one in the world to present Picasso's complete painted, sculpted, engraved and illustrated oeuvre, as well as a precise record through sketches, studies, drafts, notebooks, etchings, photographs, illustrated books, films and documents of the artist's creative process.

The Musée national Picasso-Paris collection was acquired by the State through an Acceptance in Lieu scheme, executed by Pablo Picasso's heirs in 1979 and then by Jacqueline Picasso's heirs in 1990.

It has been expanded over the years through outstanding acquisitions :

- Picasso's private collection (Iberian statues, African and Oceanic masks, paintings by Le Nain, Corot, Vuillard, Cézanne, Gauguin, Matisse, Le Douanier Rousseau, Renoir, Braque, Modigliani and Miro, and drawings by Degas, Chirico and Giacometti) was donated to the State by his heirs in accordance with the artist's wishes. Initially, it comprised of 50 works by old and contemporary masters, which entered the collection through a donation made in 1973 and finalized in 1978. The collection was enhanced through Pablo Picasso's Acceptance in Lieu scheme of 1979.
- Picasso's personal archives were donated by his heirs in 1978, and were pre-classified before entering the national collections through a gift in 1992 (about 200,000 pieces).
- In 1980, with the intention to open the museum, Picasso's family and friends donated works they owned or had inherited from the artist.
- The museum has regularly adhered to an acquisition-by-purchase policy since its creation in 1985. This has facilitated the national collection's acquisition of over a thousand additional artworks.

This remarkable collection has bestowed upon the Musée national Picasso-Paris a critical international role in presenting Picasso's works and in continuing to research his life, his oeuvre, and modern art in general.

An inestimable archival collection

A few years after Picasso's death, his heirs decided to give the French State his personal archives, manuscripts, prints and photographs in order to facilitate the study of his work while ensuring the integrity of the collection

Picasso assembled and conserved throughout his life. Together with the works that entered the national collections through the Acceptance in Lieu scheme of 1979, these objects and documents established the foundation for one of the most remarkable ensembles on Picasso ever collected.

This archive collection was given to the representatives of the Ministry of Culture and Communication, physically in 1980, and then legally in 1991. Responsibility for the collection has been shared jointly, right from the start, between representatives of the Musée national Picasso-Paris and the National Archives. It was assigned to the Musée national Picasso-Paris by an order of February 1992 which required the institution to take charge of the final classification, inventory, management and scientific conservation of the collection in accordance with archival legislation.

It is estimated that this collection contains approximately 17,000 photographs and 200,000 archives.

3.5 THE HÔTEL SALÉ : A STUNNING SETTING

The Hôtel was built between 1656 and 1660 by the architect Jean Boullier for the Lord of Fontenay, Pierre Aubert, who was a salt tax collector. The building thus became known as the Hôtel Salé (salé meaning salty in French). It was one of the most emblematic private residences built in the late seventeenth century on Rue de Thorigny, in the Marais district. It is a rare example of a complete building in the Mazarin architectural style of the time.

After the City of Paris purchased the block containing the Hôtel Aubert de Fontenay in 1964, the building was inhabited by a succession of occupants and became rather dilapidated. By an order of October 29, 1968, the Hôtel was designated a Historic Monument. It was then renovated between 1974 and 1985.

Michel Guy, French Secretary of State for Culture, decided to house Picasso's collection in the Hôtel Aubert de Fontenay. Indeed, the remarkable collection of Picasso's works demanded a grand and unique space for its public exhibition.

In 1981, the State granted a 99-year lease to the City of Paris. It was agreed that the State would carry out large-scale renovation work, ensure the maintenance of the building and take charge of running the future museum.

Between 1979 and 1985, the building was renovated, restructured and refitted to allow Roland Simounet to install the collections for the museum. He created large white rooms which were integrated into the large historic rooms of the Hôtel. These modern spaces, surrounded by a series of concave cornices that provided light, echoed the Le Corbusier tradition. The sculptor Diego Giacometti was asked to create the furniture, and the burnished bronze and white resin light fittings.

The Musée national Picasso-Paris was inaugurated in October 1985 by the President of the French Republic, François Mitterrand.

Then, between 2009 and 2014, the Hôtel Salé was renovated, modernized, restored and extended. The construction, managed by architect Jean-François Bodin, tripled the surface area of the exhibition space and public reception space. It ensured compliance with new safety, security and accessibility regulations. Bodin carefully restored and standardized Roland Simounet's extensive refurbishments while respecting the spirit and form of Simounet's original project.

Bodin's work reconciles the different styles that form the rich history of the architecture of Musée national Picasso-Paris while enhancing the spaces where the collection is exhibited. The historical elements of the Hôtel Salé have also undergone extensive restoration, particularly the decorative elements and sculptures of the central staircase, under the supervision of Stéphane Thouin, Chief Architect for Historic Monuments.

4.1 TIMELINE

1881

Pablo is born on 25 October, to Don José Ruiz Blasco (1838-1913) and Doña María Picasso y López (1855-1939). José Ruiz Blasco teaches drawing at the Malaga School of Fine Arts and is curator at the municipal museum. Picasso is later joined by his two sisters: Dolorès, nicknamed Lola (1884-1958), and Concepción or Conchita (1887-1895).

1888-1889

Encouraged by his father, Pablo begins painting.

1892-1895

Picasso studies at the Fine Arts School in La Coruña and practises illustration and drawing caricatures at home. Produces his first oil paintings.

10 January 1895

Death of his sister Conchita from diphtheria which deeply affects Pablo. Pablo's first visit to the Prado museum, Madrid.

July 1895

Paints La fillette aux pieds nus (The Barefoot Girl) (oil on canvas, MP2)

September 1895

Meets Manuel Pallarès, who would become a lifelong friend.

1896-1897

Pablo studies at La Lonja in Barcelona. First major works, La première Communion (The First Communion) (1896, oil on canvas, Barcelona, Museu Picasso) and Science et Charité (Science and Charity) (1897, oil on canvas, Barcelona, Museu Picasso), which wins a gold medal at the General Exhibition in Málaga. Picasso enrolls at the San Fernando Royal Academy of Fine Arts in Madrid.

1898

Visits the village of Horta de Ebro (today known as Horta de San Juan) for the first time. Landscape studies.

1899

In Barcelona, the artist begins frequenting the Els Quatre Gats, a café in Barcelona known within the literary and artistic milieu as a place of support of modern art from France as well as Catalonian traditional and folk art.

1900

First visit to Paris, with his friend, Casagendas: his painting Les Derniers moments (Last Moments) is presented at the Exposition Universelle in Paris.

1901

17 February 1901: Casagendas commits suicide at a café in Paris. During the summer, Picasso has his first exhibition in Paris at the Galeries Vollard, organised by the dealer Pedro Mañach, a renowned anarchist. It was there that Picasso meets the poet Max Jacob. Start of Picasso's Blue period during which he frequently visits Saint-Lazare Hospital to observe the sick. Paints La Mort de Casagendas (The Death of Casagendas) and Autoportrait bleu (Self-Portrait in Blue).

1902

Produces his first clay sculpture, Femme assise (Seated Woman) (MP 230), and a series of erotic drawings. Meets the sculptor Julio González. Shares lodgings rented by Max Jacob on Boulevard Voltaire, Paris. Exhibitions in April hosted by the gallerist Berthe Weill who is the first in France to sell works by Picasso, then in June with Henri Matisse: these two exhibitions reveal the blue period.

Moves to the Bateau-Lavoir studio, in Montmartre. Meets André Salmon and Guillaume Apollinaire; becomes a frequent visitor to the Au lapin agile café and the Circus Medrano. Meets Fernande Olivier, who modelled for him before becoming his partner for the next seven years. Late 1904, Picasso gradually moves into his Rose period.

1905

Travels to the Netherlands. Sculpts Le Fou (The Madman) (1905, bronze, MP231) inspired by Max Jacob. Meets Leo and then Gertrude Stein, and begins her portrait (Portrait of Gertrude Stein, 1906, New York, Metropolitan Museum).

1906

Visiting the Louvre, he discovers Iberian art (sites in Osuna and Cerro de Los Santos), then studies Gauguin. In summer he stays in Gósol, a remote village in Catalonia, where his Rose period flourished.

1907

Acquires two Iberian stone head sculptures from Géry Pieret, Apollinaire's secretary. They learn in August 1911 that they had been stolen from the Louvre. Introduced to Georges Braque by Apollinaire. Visits the Trocadéro Museum of Ethnography, in Paris, and finishes Les Demoiselles d'Avignon (The Young Ladies of Avignon)

1908

Peint des paysages et des figures où la forme se trouve simplifiée et schématisée.

1909

Spends the summer in Horta de Ebro and paints six landscapes. Moves onto the boulevard de Clichy upon his return to Paris.

1910

Develops towards a so-called "analytic" style of Cubism (1910-1912). Kahnweiler becomes his official dealer. Exhibition at the Galeries Volland, then Picasso refuses to show his work in Paris until 1916.

1911

Picasso exhibition at the 291 Gallery in New York, followed by numerous publications in the American press. Exhibitions in Berlin, Germany (Cassirer Gallery, Secession).

1912

Exhibits at the Blaue Reiter in Munich and again in Berlin for the Berliner Secession. First construction: Guitare en carton (Guitar made from cardboard) (New York, The Museum of Modern Art). Begins introducing newspapers and other paper cut-outs into his paintings.

1913

Takes part in the "International Exhibition of Modern Art" at the Armory Show in New York and at the Moderne Galerie Tannhäuser in Munich. Develops "synthetic" Cubism (Homme à la guitar [Man and Guitar], New York, The Museum of Modern Art).

1917

Accompanies Diaghilev and the Ballets Russes to Italy. Meets the Russian ballerina Olga Kokhlova. In May, the ballet Parade (libretto by Jean Cocteau; music by Erik Satie; choreography by Léonide Massine; stage curtain, sets and costumes by Picasso; program by Guillaume Apollinaire) premieres at the Théâtre du Châtelet, Paris. The ballet then travels to Barcelona.

Matisse-Picasso exhibition at the Galerie Paul Guillaume.
12 July: Picasso marries Olga Kokhlova at the Russian church on rue Daru. Max Jacob, Apollinaire and Cocteau are witnesses. Paul Rosenberg becomes his art dealer. Picasso moves to 23 rue La Boétie.

1919-1920

Meets Joan Miró.

1921

4 February: Paulo, son of Picasso and Olga, is born.

1925

Picasso reprises the aggressive style that characterises Les Demoiselles d'Avignon (The Young Ladies of Avignon), painting La Danse (The Dance), which breaks with the neoclassicism of previous years and brings him closer to the nascent Surrealist group.

1927

By chance, he meets Marie-Thérèse Walter in the street, who goes on to become his mistress for almost ten years and gives birth to a daughter, Maya, in 1935.

1930

At the Château de Boisgeloup in the Eure, which he has just bought, he creates a huge sculpture studio and produces a series of works for which Marie-Thérèse models.

1936

Paul Éluard, a very close friend of Picasso, introduces the photographer and artist

Dora Maar to him. It is the start of a new affair which would last seven years. Their common stance against the fascism that was spreading throughout Europe would be at the source of numerous works, especially Guernica in 1937, for which Dora Maar photographs the production stages.

1937

Picasso leaves the apartment on rue La Boétie, which has already been abandoned by Olga and her son Paul, and moves into a studio located in a private mansion on the rue des Grands-Augustins. He lives and works there between 1937 and 1955 when staying in Paris.

1943

He meets the young painter Françoise Gilot, who becomes his partner for ten years. Their son Claude is born in 1947, followed by daughter Paloma in 1949.

1948

The family moves into villa La Galloise in Vallauris, a town known for its pottery. Picasso dedicates himself to ceramics.

1954

After separating from Françoise, he meets Jacqueline Roque in Vallauris. The following year they move to villa La Californie, located in the hills overlooking the bay of Cannes. In the studio of this new house, he produces numerous monumental paintings that revisit famous compositions such as Las Meninas (The Girls) by Velázquez and Le Déjeuner sur l'herbe (Luncheon on the Grass) by Manet.

1958

He and Jacqueline buy Château de Vauvenargues at the foot of Sainte-Victoire mountain. Picasso sets up a studio there between 1959 and 1962, but his principal place of work remains La Californie, followed by the Provençal farmhouse Notre-Dame-de-Vie in Mougins from 1961, his last studio.

1961

Picasso and Jacqueline marry in Vallauris.

1963

A Picasso Museum is opened in Barcelona, to which the artist donates almost all of the works from his youth.

1966

For Picasso's 85th birthday, a retrospective of his work is held in Paris at the Grand and Petit Palais.

1967

Picasso Exhibition: "Sculptures, Ceramics, Graphic Work" at the Tate Gallery in London, curated by Roland Penrose (June-August), subsequently presented at the Museum of Modern Art in New York (October 1967-January 1968).

1969

Picasso enters an intense sequence of paintings during which he produces 165 works in a year (between 5 January 1969 and 2 February 1970), with subjects including portraits, couples, nudes, men with swords, smokers and still lifes.

1973

8 April: Picasso dies at his farmhouse Notre-Dame-de-Vie in Mougins.
The exhibition "Pablo Picasso 1970-1972" at the Palais des Papes in Avignon unveils the last works created by the artist.
